

(Continued from page 186)

Racy undies are a dime a dozen, but for lingerie you'll linger in, fashion follower Ellen Heisler suggests Leigh Bantivoglio's bridal collection, made of stretch silk with ivory lace (cami, $208, and tap pant, $80); leighbantivoglio.com.

Gotta love candles striped to match your wedding colors—recent bride Christina Gould says Ana Design Corp. (anacandles.com) does customs hues, too; from $22 a pair.

Putting on the dog

Nine out of 10 wedding planners agree that the pig in a blanket is today's most popular hors d'oeuvre. Too pedestrian for your party? Fancy them up with gourmet mustards for dipping.

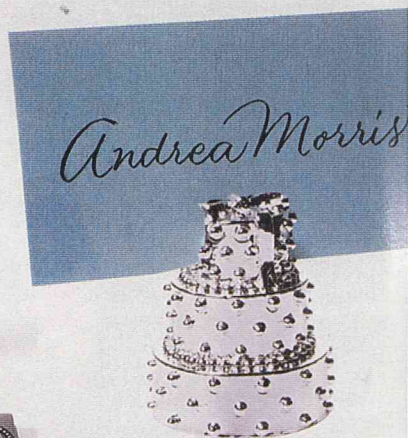

Impress the guests and slip your invitation into a silk pouch from RedBliss (choose from nine colors); prices include a mailing box, so shipping's easy. From $24 each; redbliss.com/atelier.jsp.

Guy allergic to salespeople? De Beers' new Web site, debeers.com, lets him research rocks, figure your ring size, and snag a dazzler starting at $500; deputy editor Sally Kilbridge applauds the diamonds' conflict-free guarantee.

Waikiki is enjoying one hot second act. Travel pro Lexi Dwyer cites a stunning new beachwalk with sexy shops, hotels, and cafés—Nobu and Roy Yamaguchi are neighbors!

This silverplate place-card holder—tiny but with a nice heft—is also a wallet-friendly favor: Wedding style guru Maria McBride found them at beau-coup.com at $21 for 12.

More serious than a whitening toothpaste, cheaper than custom trays, Treswhite's pre-filled, disposable trays (average price, $100) make bleaching your teeth supersimple.

